

The Legend of John

Chapter 1: The Symbol

---

John was a student who always stood apart. Tall, silent, wearing dark glasses even on gloomy days. He was called a weirdo, but he didn't care. He was searching for something—and not among the books.

One day, a strange inscription appeared on the board in John's room: univeRsITy, with the letter "T" drawn in such a way that it also resembled a "P." When someone asked why he had done it, John simply replied:

- *"It's a choice. Truth or Prison. You either learn the truth, or you remain a prisoner."

This inscription became a legend in the dorm, but no one took it seriously—until John disappeared.

Chapter 2: Disappearance

---

He was last seen when he entered the locked eastern wing of the university—the old, burnt part that had been scorched in a fire twenty years ago. He was holding something in his hands. Some say it was a map, others say it was an ancient book.

After that—no trace. His room remained untouched. On the table, there were glasses with white crosses on the lenses. And on the wall, written in chalk, was one word: DEATH.

Chapter 3: Return

---

Seven years passed. New students knew nothing about John, but the old-timers would sometimes tell the story when the lights flickered or the doors creaked without the wind. And then—he returned.

On one of the security cameras, the night guard saw a figure: a skull in an old helmet, with large dark glasses through which red "X"s glowed. On his forehead was the inscription univeRsITy, with the same T/P.

He couldn't be recognized—but everyone knew who it was.

Chapter 4: Symbolism

---

Now, this T/P symbol has become a mark that appears on walls, mirrors, laptop screens. It pulses when someone lies. It glows when someone is afraid.

There are rumors that John is searching for the person who betrayed him that night—in the eastern wing. Some say he's alive. Others say it's a curse. And there are those who believe he has become a part of the university itself.

Chapter 5: Truth or Prison

---

One student—a freshman named Andriy—saw the inscription on his bed: T/P. The next day, he disappeared. A week later—again T/P. And another student disappeared.

Now, everyone knows: if you see this mark—you're being tested. Either you choose the truth and find a way out. Or you stay forever...

...in the prison of knowledge, from which John never escaped. But returned.

Epilogue

---

The story isn't over.

You're here too.

You're reading this.

And on your screen...

...the T/P symbol is already appearing.

Created that story – ChatGPT (AI)